Constituency Report Which High Profile MP is Safe or at Risk? 25th July 2022

Methodology & Approach

Methodology and Approach:

Analysis of the report is based on “Likely Voters” Model. Voters who indicated they will not vote were excluded from the overall analysis of the for the primaries and general elections head-to-head. Comparative analysis for the April 2022 poll was adjusted to reflect “Likely Voters” only.

Sample Size: 5,490

Confidence Interval: 99%

Margin of Error: MoE of $\pm 1.737\%$

Population of voters in the 75 constituencies: 4,877,028

Sampling Method

- 75 constituencies were selected randomly using simulation model.
- Out of the 75 constituencies randomly selected, 41 were won by the NPP and 34 were won by the NDC in the 2020 general elections.

Sampling Frame

- The 2020 Electoral Commissions voters' register was used as a sampling frame for the purpose of allocating sample size to each constituency.
- Allocation of sample to each constituency on basis of registered voters in the constituencies relative to the 75 constituencies selected.
- For each constituency selected, the location for the interview was also selected randomly from three Electoral Areas of the constituency.
- The margin of error for zeroing reports to constituency level will have significantly larger margin of error.
- The results of each constituency poll presented may represent a statistical noise, and therefore further survey with higher sample size relative to the voters' population in the constituency will be necessary to confirm the findings from this national poll as it relates to the constituency

Fieldwork:

- Interviews were carried out between 1st July – 15th July 2022.

Demographic analysis: Demographic analysis of the poll will have higher margin or error.

ANALYSIS AND COMMENTARY

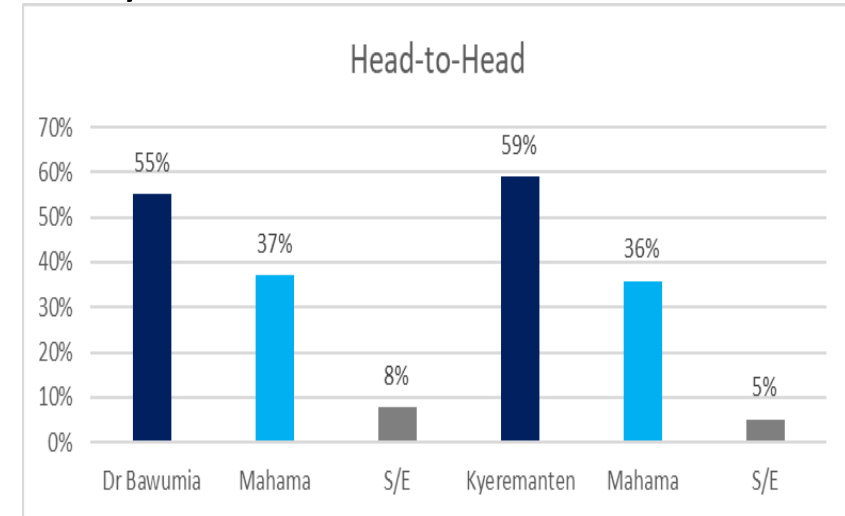

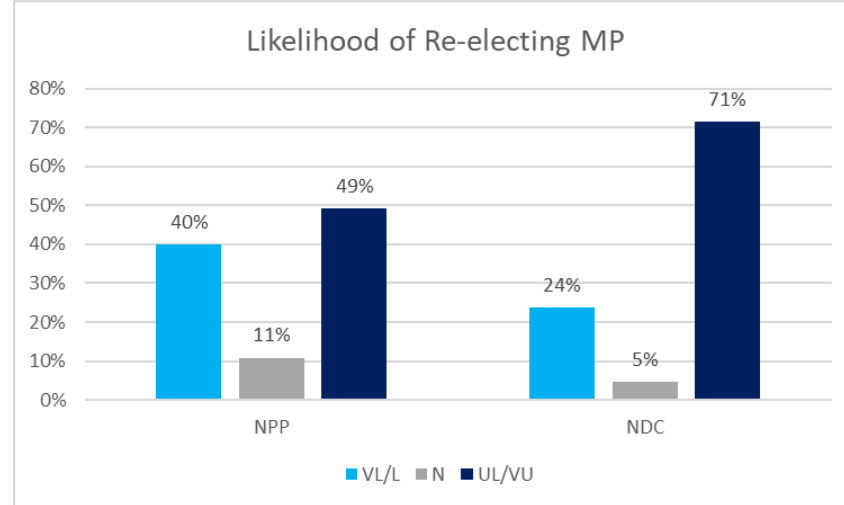

2020 RESULT

84.80%

Margin :

69.60%

- ❑ Right Direction: 20%. Wrong Direction 74% . No opinion 6%
- ❑ Presidential Approval: Approve-14%, Disapprove- 85%, No opinion-1%
- ❑ Party Affiliation: NPP, 67%. NDC, 26%. FV, 4%, Other, 4%.
- ❑ Very Likely/Likely 34%. Very unlikely/unlikely 58%. Neutral 8%

Conclusion: In an overwhelmingly NPP constituency, the Hon. Minister of Education is underwater as 58% of voters are unlikely to vote for him. Within his base, those unlikely to vote for him is nearly 50%. Would he become a casualty in the NPP primaries? If he wins, he will win re-election.

2020 RESULT

84.72%

Margin :

69.44%

- ▣ Right Direction: 22%. Wrong Direction 67% . No opinion 12%
- ▣ Presidential Approval: Approve-33%, Disapprove- 57%, No opinion-10%
- ▣ Party Affiliation: NPP, 45%. NDC, 15%. FV, 0%, Other,34%.
- ▣ Very Likely/Likely 21%. Very unlikely/unlikely 71%. Neutral 8%

Conclusion: The incumbent and Minister of Energy is on the rope as 71% voters are unlikely to vote for him. There is a cross party opposition to his re-election bid as NPP, NDC and Floating voters prepare to hang him. The MP is in real danger and could struggle to win his primaries. Though NPP presidential candidates are winning against John Mahama, the Minister is unable to benefit from their performance. He appears to be the problem.

- ❑ Party Affiliation: NPP, 35%. NDC, 41%. FV, 11%, Other, 13%.
- ❑ Very Likely/Likely 29%. Very unlikely/unlikely 47%. Neutral 24%

Conclusion: The MP is in trouble as nearly half of the voters are unlikely to vote for her. Her re-lection bid will be difficult if JM wins the constituency as he currently leads both NPP frontrunners 70% to 24% and 83% to 7%. Voters across all party lines appose to her re-election. A swing of 15% is needed to flip the seat. If Mahama wins the constituency, the seat goes.

Conclusion: The Hon Minister is also in trouble as half of the voters are unlikely to vote for her. Majority of NPP voters are unlikely to vote for her (44%). John Mahama currently leads in the constituency, an if JM carried the constituency, we expect the Minister to lose her. A swing of less than 5% is required to flip the seat and if the polls are to be correct, we don't see her surviving the onslaught in 2024

- ❑ Party Affiliation: NPP, 48%. NDC, 40%. FV, 10%, Other, 2%.
- ❑ Very Likely/Likely 40%. Very unlikely/unlikely 42%. Neutral 18%

Conclusion: The GA Regional Minister is fighting for his survival as voters are split in the middle about his future. With a swing of only 4% required and Mahama leading in the constituency, though NPP respondents outnumber NDC, he is not winning his base convincingly and has to rely on NDC voters to stay safe. If NDC rally behind a candidate of their own, it could be a very difficult election for him. It is unlikely he will survive.

- ❑ Very Likely/Likely 26%. Very unlikely/unlikely 63%. Neutral 12%

Conclusion: The incumbent could be on the verge of losing her seat as both NPP and NDC voters unite to get rid of her. She has serious issues within her party which represents 58% of the voters of which 57% are unlikely to vote for her. She is vulnerable in the primaries. If she wins the primaries, she is likely to lose the general elections if Mahama wins the constituency.

2020 RESULT

50.24%

Margin :

0.48%

Conclusion: The MP nearly 50% of voters supports the incumbent with over 60% of his base supporting him and 38% of NDC. If he fails to attract the size of support in the NDC and they abandon him for their own, he could be a serious trouble as Mahama has a commanding lead in the constituency. He needs cross party support to survive.

- ❑ Very Likely/Likely 49%. Very unlikely/unlikely 47%. Neutral 4%

Conclusion: The incumbent is neither safe nor at risk as she marginally favored to retain her seat. In a constituency where respondents were 78% NDC, her problems is clearly self-inflicted. If she can address her internal dissatisfaction, she will retain the seat as JM leads sufficiently in the constituency. She is hanging on a thread with a swing of 2%, she needs her party behind her to survive.
